Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox Dies After Long Illness

Author and Poetess Suffered Nervous Collapse While Doing War Work.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 20.—Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, author and poetsess, died at her home, "The Bungalow," in Branford today. Mrs. Wilcox had been ill for some months, having had a nervous collapse while engaged in war relief work in England.

engaged in war relief work in England.

Her death was not unexpected to those who shared the seclusion of her home. The exact nature of her final illness is not stated.

Mrs. Wilcox was in her sixty-fourth year and was a native of Wisconsin. She was married to Mr. Wilcox in 1884. Her literary work embraced a large number of books, both prose and poetry, and she was a contributor to many publications.

Her surviving relatives are a brother and a sister.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed. The body will be taken to Springfield, Mass., for cremation and a service will be held there, although the time has not yet been determined.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox was born at Johnstowne Center, Wis., in 1855. At the age of eight she began to compose prose and poetry and became a neighborhood celebrity. At the age of fourteen she became dissatisfied with her audience and decided to seek wider recognition.

In writing of her feelings at that period she said: Born with intense Graving for pleasure. I should have been the variest amusement seeker in my youth had not necessity stood at my elbow. My early start in my profession was due to my desire to change my horizon and better the conditions of the home where no one was contented."

A few weeks later her first prose work was published in the New York Mercury and her first poem in the Waverly magazine.

At fifteen the young authoress received her first check from Frank Lesil'e publishing house and this opened "a perfect floodgate of aspiration, inspiration and ambition" in her, within six months she received additional checks from Harper's and the Saturday Evening Post.

While still in her teens "Drops of Water," a collection of verses by the young authores, was published.

In the years immediately following Miss Wheeler began to get nation-wide fecognition, and in 1884 just after her marriage to Robert M. Wilcox, she came East to live,

Her success and popularity in New York was instantaneous. Works from her pen attracted international attention. A few years later Mrs. W. ox toured Europe with her husband. English and foreign language publishing houses were reproducing her poetry and prose. She was eagerly sought as the guest of honor in the salons of foreign capitals and was presented at court to the British and other monarchs.

her admirers have steadily increased in recent years.

After the death of her husband in May, 1916. Mrs. Wilcox went to Europe and devoted her life to war work. She found time, in spite of her unceasing efforts, to write several articles depicting conditions abroad Among her recent writings that have been read throughout the world were several concerning quommunications with the spirit of her late husband.

Among the works of Mrs. Wilcox, aside from her remarkable contributions to the New York Evening Journal, are "An Ambitious man." "A Double Life," "Drops of Water." "Sweet Dantions to the New York Evening Journal, are "An Ambitious man," "A Double Life," "Drops of Water." "Sweet Dangers." "Was It Suicide?" "Every Day Thoughts," "Poems of Passion," "Poems of Pleasure," "Three Women." "Kingdom of Love and Other Poems," "An Erring Woman's Love," Men, Women and Emotion." "The Beautiful Land of Nod." No Trumphery There.
Of "Sonnets of Sorrow and Triumph," Current Opinion says: "Mrs. Wilcox has in the past injured her standing as a poet by pulishing a great deal of trumpery. But there is no trumpery in this little volume, it is all genuine and vital, and will come close to the hearts of a those who have been through experiences similar to hers." The consensus of opinion as regards Mrs. Wilcox's work seems to be that she was at her best when writing things that she felt, rather than what she thought. Her later work has a didactic quality which does not enhance its appeal as poetry.

Mrs. Wilcox never subscribed to the new school of poetry, which found expression in vers libre, Of the movement, she said: "Occasional beautiful results are obtained by new school poets, but I cannot help deploring the impertinence and intolerance which they display toward the established poets."

She herself, belonged to the school which places form as an essential to poetry. Her earlier poems are marked by a feeling for from and rhythmic effect which make up a large part of their charm.

"Solitude" Best Known.

Perhaps her best known and best loved poem is "Solitude." She herself, said that one stanza of this poem, the lines beginning "Laugh and the world laughts with you," came to her entire and complete. A friend to whom she submitted them for criticism told her that she had there the nucleus of a great poem, and she said that acting upon his advice, she "put them away" in her mind, until she could find the rest of the poem. "Soitude" is one of her earlier poems, and was published in "Poems of Passion."

"Laugh, and the world laughs with you, Weep, and you weep alone.

But they shrink from volcing care.

Rejoice, and men will seek you,

Grieve, and they turn and go.

They want full measure of all your pleasure.

But they do not want your wee.
Be glad, and your friends are many.
Be sad, and you lose them all.
There are none to decline your nectar'd

There are none to decime your wins,

But alone, you must drink life's gall.
Feast, and your halls are crowded,
Fast, and the world goes by.
Succeed, and give, and it helps you live,
But no man can help you die.

But one by one we must all file on, that the vatican is determined to wage a vigorous campaign against vulgar feminine attire. The pontiff, in receiving a delegation from the Italian Catholic Women's union, praised their opposition against immodest attire, saying:
Through the narrow sisles of pain."

"Catholic Women must not only be virtuous, but must adopt a style of dress in keeping with modesty. They must refuse to adopt exaggerated immoral fashions, which are a source of genuine corruption. It has come to my knowledge that certain modern femining influence on society has for design these abominable fashions which appear ignorant of the poison they are spreading. conference, which was created by the treaty of peace.

"The accomplishments of this conference must be for the highest good of the individual commensurate with the good of the masses." Secretary Wilson said. "You will deal with the great unsolved, but not unsolvable problem of spiritual and material development. Upon the proper solution depends the future progress of the world."

The secretary's address of welcome was translated into two languages. Germany and Austria were without delegates, but their representatives are now en routs and the questions of seating them will be for the conference to decide.

Countries having delegates present today included Great Britain, France, Japan, Italy, Belgium, Spain, Holland, Sweden, Canada, China, Czecho-Slovakia, Switzerland, Denmark, Greece, Norway and practically all of the central and South American republics.

Mrs. T. C. Taylor Returns To Washington From London

Former Tennessee Woman Son Desperately Injured in Air Service. Washington, Oct. 30.—(Special.)— Mrs. T. C. Taylor, of Washington, formerly a Tennessee woman, has just returned from London with her son, who was desperately injured in the British air service and who has for several months been in an army hospital in that city.

When the United States entered the war this young man endeavored to join Uncle Sam's air forces, but he was too young to get in. He had learned a great deal about the game, and was determined to do something along that line, so he went into Canada and there offered his services. He was an apt student and so became an expert worthy of the most exacting requirements. One day, however, while he was giving an exhibition of his skill something went wrong with his machine and it crumpled and went to the ground with a crash. Since that time he has been in the hospital. For a long time his life was despaired of. His mother, who is a yeomanette, was notified of his condition, and the United States government sent her to his relief. She was taken in charge by the British government, and she remained for many weeks to nurse and care for her sick boy, and finally he recovered sufficiently for her to bring him home, He is now recuperating near this city. returned from London with her son, of all step-latine, who is nother married a number of years ago, after having removed from Tennessee to Washington.

The young man's right name is Will Chrisman. His mother was formerly Miss Posle Hunter, of Hendersonville, Tenn. She first married the late Ernest E. Chrisman, of Gallatin, editor and publisher of the Summer County News. After his mother had married the second time, Will Chrisman joined her here, and he so esteemed his step-father that he persisted in calling himself Taylor and has since that time held to that name.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, have a beautiful home, where they now live, at Fairview, Virginia, about ten miles from Washington, near Great Falls, on the Presented where they foully home.
